Enough is Enough:
Combating Sexual Assault on College Campuses

An Idea Comes In...

- Can't we create an app (or a mobile website) where any SUNY student who is a victim of a crime can immediately find on campus and off campus resources?
- How hard could that be?

Sexual Assault & Violence Response (SAVR)

A guide to building and managing online resources

One state, 64 campuses

- How do we best share the same safety resources among different, but similar, campus communities?

Sexual Assault & Violence Response (SAVR) Resources

SUNY takes reports of sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence and stalking seriously. If you are a member of a SUNY community and have experienced any of the above, this Sexual Assault & Violence Response (SUNY SAVR) Resources Website provides you with information you can use to seek resources and support, and to report the crime to law enforcement and the campus.

SUNY students and employees have the right to make a report to University Police/Campus Security, local law enforcement, and/or the State Police or choose not to report; to report the incident to your college; to be protected by the college from retaliation for reporting an incident; and to receive assistance and resources from your college.

SUNY's policy is that response to sexual violence and related crimes is driven by the reporting victim/survivor. What that means is that in line with Federal and New York State law, while the University encourages you to use all of the response, support and reporting (including criminal reporting) resources offered here, the choice of what resources to use and when is for the victim and survivor.
